How to Use The Guide ENJOY THE PARADE TO ITS FULLEST!

To fully enjoy the 2016 Spring HBA Parade of Homes, the Home Builders Association of Greater Grand Rapids (HBAGGR) has developed this Official Guide. Inside are tools to help you find the Parade Homes and builders you want to visit.

Parade Home Overviews include a photo or drawing of the home, design highlights, summary of features and builder information. Each home is assigned a Parade Number which you will find on one of the four maps. Each home has its own web page where you will find links to the builder, map to the home and additional home information.

This home was built to Energy Star standards and has been certified by a third-party rater.

Area Maps (pgs. 87-90) Each home is indicated on the map by Parade Number.

Parade Directory (pgs. 14 -15) will help you easily locate Parade homes by builder, city, and sale price.

Important Symbols on the home overview pages may include:

This home is for sale: refer to the index on page xx for price range.

This home was built to Green Built Michigan standards and has been certified by a thirdparty rater.

This home features Universal Design elements.

OF GREATER GRAND RAPIDS

Josh Berghuis

Welcome to the annual Spring Parade of Homes of Greater Grand Rapids presented by the Home Builders Association of Greater Grand Rapids and sponsored by Option 1 Credit Union!

The HBA has been presenting this premier showcase since 1959 and this year's Parade promises to be one of the biggest and best ever. It will feature 86 homes created by 67 different builders providing inspiration for potential new home buyers or those looking to remodel.

The housing market in Greater Grand Rapids is hot again and is receiving recognition as one of the best, if not the best, markets in the country. Our builders and associate members see this event as a premier way to showcase their talents, craftsmanship and creativity to those looking to build new or remodel. Every latest trend in the industry from 'dirt to drapes' will be on display to the public.

The Parade features homes from 22 different West Michigan communities ranging from city center to the lakeshore. The communities include: Ada, Allendale, Byron Center, Caledonia, Comstock Park, Dorr, East Grand Rapids, Grand Rapids, Grandville, Grand Rapids Township, Grandville, Hudsonville, Jamestown, Jenison, Kentwood, Marne, Middleville, Rockford, Spring Lake, West Olive, Wyoming and Zeeland. With prices ranging from $150,000 to over $1 million, builders will be showcasing the latest trends in building styles, using green practices, custom details, unique floor coverings, the latest wall treatments, quality products, and landscaping.

For more information on the Parade of Homes, you can contact the HBA at (616) 281-2021, or view the Parade online at www.mygrhome.com/ paradeofhomes.

Thank you for coming out to support our builders and vendors in this event that is another testament to why the Greater Grand Rapid area is such a great place to live!

Sincerely,

Josh Berghuis, Berghuis Construction 2016 HBAGGR President

GRAND RAPIDS

Julie Bonner Williams | Grand Rapids Magazine

"THE MAUVE COUNTERTOPS just had to go," said homeowner Kim Losik.

When she and husband Andy bought their Fennville home in summer 2013, they loved the house but knew changes were needed to make it fit their lifestyle and personality.

"Everything was functional, it's just a matter of taste," Losik said, noting their list of priorities began with the kitchen, master bathroom, and the need for a tack room in the barn where they keep their three horses.

While the tack room was a simple project — the previous owner had left behind wood and a door that could be used for the project — home renovations took more time, planning and budgeting.

And so the mauve countertop met its demise.

"We were like, if we're doing a kitchen, let's do it all new," explained Losik, pointing out the granite countertop, the white cabinets that replaced the former honey oak cupboards, and the new hardwood floor that's a close match with the existing hardwood floor on the main level of the home.

New appliances also were added, as was a tile backsplash. The choices the Losiks made reflect current trends in home renovation, says Paula DeHaan, past-president of the Home Builders Association of Greater Grand Rapids and owner of custom home-building company P.A. DeHaan LLC.

"Everyone is re-doing kitchens and baths," with popular color trends including whites, grays and blues, she said.

"People like to see a commercial look to their kitchen. Appliances have new colors, like slate gray. People are tired of the finger-prints of the stainless appliances." Builder Joel Peterson, owner of J. Peterson Homes, agrees that homeowners are targeting kitchens and bathrooms for renovation, especially in houses built in the '80s and '90s — and more recently. "i've torn out kitchens that are 10 years old," Peterson said. "The things aren't broken down — it's about personal taste. The owner may have bought the house, loved the house, loved the floor plan, but maybe can't stand the natural oak cabinets. It gets very personal for people. A couple who buys a house may love to cook, but the house they bought doesn't accommodate that."

Michael and Elizabeth TerHorst are one such couple. After recently moving from downtown Chicago to East Grand Rapids, the TerHorsts, parents of three young children, opted to tear the home's interior back "to the studs."

A completely new, larger kitchen was of top importance. "Cooking is really big for us — we love to cook. We wanted a big, highly functional kitchen. That was number one," Michael said.

The TerHorsts had hardwood flooring installed throughout the home, choosing a darker wood floor to contrast with white cupboards and a white quartz countertop with a light gray backsplash. They opted for stainless steel appliances, including a Wolf range, and brushed nickel fixtures.

"We spent a lot of money to have a custom-built kitchen where every single drawer was planned, and maxed out the functionality. And we're glad we did. We love the finished product," Michael said.

The quartz countertops are another new trend in kitchen renovations.

"We're seeing a lot of quartz counter-tops going in," DeHaan said, pointing out the appeal of quartz's low maintenance.

Changes in bathrooms mirror what's happening with kitchens: Hardwood is the most popular flooring, while granite, limestone and quartz are top choices for countertops. For fixtures, top picks include brushed nickel, chrome, or the new bronze or satin-finish brass finishes.

While hardwood and tile flooring have been popular for years in bathrooms, what's hot is newer versions of the traditional.

"We're seeing a lot of wider-plank wood floors, and wider, longer-format tile. Instead of 12-by-12-inch tile, they're using 12-by-24," Peterson said.

Another trend in bathroom renovations is heated flooring — complete with a thermostat to control the temperature — and large showers with music speakers and Bluetooth capability.

Today's bathrooms reflect the functionality people are embracing. Although builders usually suggest a home should never be without at least one bathtub in consideration of its resale value, especially for families with young children — the trend is toward walk-in showers, often with dual showerheads. Gone are the days of spa-jet bathtubs.

Like bathrooms and kitchens, bedrooms are becoming more about functionality and practicality.

Peterson said although huge master bedrooms were popular in the past three decades — some measuring 20-by-20 feet and including a sitting area — today's home-owners want less floor space dedicated to the master bedroom.

"People realize they don't spend that much time in their bedroom, and the time they're in the bedroom, they're sleeping," he explained.

Individual lifestyles and tastes dictate much of a home's configuration and personality, yet there seem to be some commonalities that span generations and neighborhoods.

More people are seeking out sustainability in their homes — ways to reduce the use of heating fuel and electricity. The most popular solution? Tear down the walls!

"People are looking to modernize by opening up the old floor plans," Peterson said. "A lot of older homes had disjointed rooms. Today, it's about opening up — it fits better with today's lifestyle. Energy efficiency is hot and is part of what people are doing to modernize and update."

Like the Losiks, a priority for the TerHorsts was to have an open, modern floor plan. So after buying their home, a two-story American Craftsman style, and finding a builder it was time to knock out interior walls.

"We completely gutted the whole house, opened up a bunch of walls. We made it a more modern, modernized home," Michael said.

In today's home market, "modernized" is taking on a whole new meaning.

Josh Berghuis, owner of Berghuis Construction, agrees. "You can control anything (in your home) through your phone, through a touch pad. You can control music through-out your home from your phone — you can even be in California and open your garage with your phone. It's cool."

While the use of technology is on the rise, making better use of natural light is also something homeowners are focusing on, both to provide an airier ambience and to reduce use of electricity, thus lowering the cost of living in the home.

"In the industry as a whole, renovations are about more sustainability, about being better stewards of what we have. I really see that: more glass, more natural light, more environmentally friendly," Berghuis said.

Sustainability was on Losik's mind when she and husband Andy had a wood-burning fireplace installed in a sitting area off their living room after the cost of heating with propane soared in recent years. The couple chose a natural stone front, a lime-stone hearth, and a re-purposed, century-old barn beam as a mantle.

"One reason we put a wood burner in is we have propane, and it's so expensive. The wood heat and the ambience are comfy-cozy," Losik said.

Next on her list of renovations was re-designing the home's mudroom, some-thing DeHaan says reflects a trend second only to installing new technology: "Organization is a big thing. People want (clutter) closed off." Mudrooms are commonly requested by clients designing new homes. Berghuis says families with children want a specific location for stowing boots, shoes and back-packs. The Losik's mudroom renovation is underway, including slate flooring. When it's finished, the main wall will include a bench with a row of hooks and a shelf above it, and cabinets above the shelf.

Once the mudroom is complete, the basement is next on the list with plans for installing a new bathroom, a workout area and what Losik calls "a hang-out area" space for her teenage daughter and friends to socialize. "It's a slow process. It takes planning. And money," Losik said..

YOU'VE FOUND A BUILDER NOW WHAT WHAT COMES NEXT

You have found a builder you want to work with...what comes next?

Determine Your Floor Plan

A good place to start is with an existing plan and modify it to your liking. If you start from scratch and design your own plan enlist the help of an architect. Things to consider include architectural style, bedroom size, kitchen layout and placement, bathrooms, mud room, laundry room, garage, what would you like to see from your window. Think through how you want to live in the spaces, how you envision your furniture, where do you plan to eat your meals. Consider what you want in your exterior spaces.

Financing

Pre-Qualify - Before you do anything else - determine what you can afford to pay for a home. This is one of the most important steps! Get in touch with a lender, they will ask you to provide financial information, and various items to give you a prequalified letter. Next you will obtain a construction loan from a lender. It will include a down payment, points, and during the construction process, your builder will submit "draw requests" to your lender in order to pay subcontractors and suppliers during the construction period. At the end of the construction period, your loan will convert to a permanent loan.

Determine the Cost of the Home

Get an initial estimate from your builder of the cost based on the desired features. Stay in your budget!

Sign the Contract

Every project should have a contract, no matter the size of the estimated work. Every detail about the project should be included in this contract — from a work timetable, (start and finish dates), to description of the work, to materials that will be used—right down to the brand or make of the fixtures—to the payment schedule and everything in between, including a time limit for fixing defects. Contracts ensure that if a dispute arises, it can be dealt with in a timely manner. Be sure to communicate with your contractor all of your expectations.

Final Selections

Once your contract is signed and financing is arranged you will meet with your builder to begin the process of finalizing your decisions. This is the fun part. You get to decide on the elements that will make it your home!

Pre-Construction Meeting

After your financing is in place, once your selections are made a pre-construction meeting is held. Your final decisions are reviewed and construction is ready to begin.

Construction

Construction is 80% planning and 20% building. You have been planning and planning now it's time start building. During the course of construction there will be formal meetings to review the progress of the home. In the meantime, stop and see the progress. Call with questions. Have fun!

Closing

At or near the completion your builder will review the operation of your home and determine the status of any outstanding items to be completed. A closing date should be established for your home by this meeting.

Moving Day

Hurrah! A day to celebrate. Your dreams are realized.

BETTER LIVING ADD VALUE TO YOUR HOME WITH YOUR YARD

Do you and your family have fun in your yard, or is it just unused space that means you have a long list of chores this weekend? A well-planned yard gives you extra room to enjoy without adding a tremendous amount of upkeep, and summer is a great time for you to start making a master plan for your yard for the years to come. Landscaping can add tens of thousands of dollars to the value of your property. In fact, it is one of the few home improvements you can make that not only adds value immediately, but also increases in value as the years go by.

But just as the right landscaping can add value, overgrown or the wrong plants can detract from your homes value.

"The exterior of the home is the first thing people see," says Ryan Rodenhouse of Emerald Landscaping. The curb appeal of the home will make an immediate impression on those visiting the home. A landscape full of large, mature plants is obviously one that has been carefully tended over the years, and that sends a signal to buyers. It's a good indication that the owners have taken care of the inside of the house as well."

According to Rodenhouse "it is important to plant the right plant in the right location. Without a good plan you may find yourself with a high maintenance, overgrown outdoor space. A professional landscaper can help you get the right plant for your area based on the environmental conditions of the site and how much maintenance the home owner wants to handle."

Landscaping is more than flowers and shrubs. Upgrades can include things like patios and decks, flowerbeds, barbecue pits, watering systems and plants of all sorts. As you enter into a landscaping project, you have plenty of choices about what kinds of upgrades to make. The trick is to make improvements that both you and prospective buyers want. If you do, then your property value will rise.

Archie Warner, of Harder and Warner, says every home is different, local landscape architects will work with homeowners to develop a master plan that makes sense for each home. "The master plan can be designed to allow the home owner to do as much or as little work as they want to tackle." Warner continues, "the plan can be designed for instant results or more of a long term plan and to work within specified budgets. The goal is to build and develop a complete outdoor environment designed for each family."

According to Warner, to develop a master plan for your home think through how you want to use the area: is it primarily a kids playground or do you want an entertainment area?

Are you looking for a retreat? Note how your house sits on the lot, where your garage, tool shed, deck, pool or other structures are and what plants you have now. Think about what you would like to have a year from now. Is it more trees for shade, more grass to play in, a flower or herb garden for cutting, or just reworking an area that takes too much time to maintain?

Many of the local landscape architects will work with you to develop the master plan. By taking the time to think through what you want your yard to look like, and noting what your limitations are, you'll have greater success with your efforts. In addition, you'll spend more time enjoying your yard instead of working in it, and you'll see an added benefit when you sell your home.

Outdoor Entertainment Areas

In recent years, outdoor entertainment areas have grown in popularity. With our busy lifestyles, these areas have become a place for us to unwind after a long day. The kitchen is the heart of the home, it's no different for the outside of the home. Whether it is an outdoor dinner party, a relaxing meal with the family, or a romantic dinner for two, an outdoor kitchen naturally brings people together and can be a valuable addition to any home.

"Outdoor kitchens and rooms are on the rise, they are a great addition that can add significant value to your home with a comparatively low investment," says Mike Mlarnik of Rivertown Landscapes. "A carefully planned outdoor room can be a feature to set your home apart from others while adding valuable living space to your property. However, the bottom line is an outdoor kitchen is just plain fun!"

A cool breeze, the smell of fresh flowers, and the many soothing sounds of nature are among the many elements enjoyed outside. But being outside does not mean we have to sacrifice comfort, privacy, or the amenities of an indoor kitchen. Today (yes, even in Michigan) outdoor kitchens can feature working sinks, weather proof cabinetry, refrigerators, and trash and recycling centers. The cooking options are not lacking either. From smokers to charcoal grills, wood fired pizza ovens to infrared burners and rotisserie attachments, the grills available to today's home owner can provide just the right cooking surface for all of your favorite meals. Many grills even offer several options of cooking all in one unit.

While the possibilities nearly endless, there are a few things to keep in mind with any project. "Planning ahead and thinking through the details will pay big dividends in the end and help eliminate headaches along the way," Mlarnik continues. "Think about the last barbeque party you attended. Where do people tend to gather? Was there enough room for serving? Food preparation? Eating? Even walking back and forth between these areas? All of these things may seem obvious but are often overlooked in an outdoor room. The best outdoor kitchens foster the natural flow between kitchens, garden, and table seamlessly."

In addition to allowing yourself enough space, there are several other items to consider to get the most out of your outdoor kitchen. Lighting, shade, prevailing winds, and proximity to the house are a few of the items to take into account. By taking these things into account you allow yourself, not only the ability to have a successful space, but to extend the amount of time you are able to enjoy the space. If your outdoor kitchen is going to be located a long way away from the main house, additional amenities such as storage and beverage centers may make more sense. The opposite is true if your outdoor kitchen is really an extension of the indoor space and only a couple steps away. Predicting nature is almost impossible. However, we can make reasonable assumptions about certain aspects such as the prevailing wind direction. The smell of a nice steak or hamburger on the grill can make your mouth water but the last thing you want is the smoke from the grill constantly blowing inside the house. Your outdoor kitchen should be located properly to take advantage of prevailing winds on a site to limit this kind of occurrence.

In addition to the wind and proximity to the main residence, you should consider the sites exposure to the sun. "If your outdoor kitchen is a long way from the house, with little or no protection from the sun, it could become too hot and uncomfortable to use on many summer days," says Mlarnik. "Why limit yourself on when you can use your new space? By adding shade and lighting to a space, you can not only make it more comfortable, but you can also extend the amount of time you are able to use your new kitchen."

Task lighting is also an important thing to remember so that you have the ability to see what you are cooking. Some grills offer built in lighting for this but shade structures also offer a great home for lighting. Structures such as awnings or pergolas can provide relief from the sun, provide a home for light fixtures, and help enclose and define the scale of a room. A somewhat enclosed or protected space tends to make people feel more comfortable and gives them the ability to truly relax without the feeling of being on display to the neighbors.

Designing a space that is both comfortable and functional may seem overwhelming. Think of room for food preparation, cooking, serving, eating and lounging while at the same time is the right distance from the house, takes advantage of prevailing winds, has the right amount of protection and enclosure. Then add in factors so the space can be used year round and looks good all at the same time. Finally, building codes, numerous utilities, and the technical part can appear just as daunting. A well planned and carefully thought out design can accomplish all of these things in any space. Landscape designers are trained to think through all the variables to come up with a timeless design for your outdoor space. With homeowners placing a greater value on the outdoor experience, there are endless opportunities for your home. To find someone to help you with your project visit myGRhome.com.

PREVENT PROBLEMS IN THE BUILDING PROCESS PREVENTATIVE MEASURES

Building a home is a big task with many people involved in the process from groundbreaking to final walk-through. The Home Builders Association wants to make sure that those looking to build or remodel know one of the most important tools that will be used in the process is the paperwork. Contract, contract...

We asked Jim Vlasicak, a Professional Mediator in West Michigan, what he has seen time and time again from his clients who have gone through tough times with a new home build or a remodel. He shared three tips that he hopes will start the right conversations between client and builder, and prevent potential disputes down the road.

Change Orders

Make sure, before work begins on the change order - you know the cost, sign a change order form, and get a credit for what was in the contract. For instance - if you are upgrading your cabinets, don't pay the full price of the upgrade only the difference between upgrade and what you originally agreed to purchase/install.

Allowances

Make sure you understand what each allowance covers. "I've seen homeowners get a $6,000.00 allowance for lighting and that only covered HALF of the cost of lighting for the new home/remodel."

Schedule of Values (aka specifications)

This should be a written addendum to your contract that details exactly what it is you are purchasing. Details such as make & model of windows, doors, garage & entry doors, roofing, paints, interior trim, cabinetry, etc.

The Home Builders Association is here to be your resource and connect you with the professionals to help you complete your project successfully and in a professional manner, or help you through a dispute or conflict with a contractor. Contact the HBA at (616) 281-2021 or visit www.myGRhome.com to find out more.

PARIS RIDGE 4631 WREN, CALEDONIA 49316

Come see our beautifully designed Bayberry ranch show home! Everything you need is on one floor for the ease of everyday living. The kitchen is top notch, with granite counter tops, stainless steel appliances, a large pantry, beautiful tile backsplash, and hardwood cabinetry. This large kitchen is open and flows into the living room with a slider to your deck, making the living room bright and open. The dining room features beautiful arches for a great architectural look and just the right touch of formality. The private master suit includes a walk-in closet with custom shelving, a double sink vanity, and hand crafted framed mirror. As if these great features aren't enough to impress, there are also two additional bedrooms, another bath with a large linen closet, main floor laundry for ease of daily chores, handcrafted lockers for storage and organization, a large two stall garage, and a huge finished family room in the lower level. There is also plenty of room to grow! The basement is rough plumbed to finish an additional bath, with room for two additional bedrooms and a theater room, which would make this already spacious home into a 5 bedroom 3 bath home. This great Sable home also features many great benefits: items such as Superior Basement walls, which are studded and ready to finish, 2x6 exterior construction allowing more insulation, and 5+ Star Energy certified. We hope you enjoy your tour through our parade home! Any questions? Feel free to ask the Sable representative at the home, or you can contact us at our office.

This home is an excellent choice for any family but has been custom designed for this particular homeowner. As with all J & J homes, we add custom detail in every corner to encourage you to venture further into this exquisitely designed home. Our goal is to maximize and utilize every inch of each home's space. We strive to provide you with an economical value, while creating for you an exceptional home that will stand out from the rest!

Some of the home's unique features are:

- The custom floor-to-ceiling rock feature greets you as you enter the foyer.
- The great room accentuated by large rustic beams incorporated into the tray ceiling.
- A large functional kitchen with custom double-stacked inset cabinetry, island and stove hood.
- The custom hutch accentuates the dining room with circular mullions in the glass doors.
- The porch reveals a masterpiece view of the small lake. The walls on the porch are sided with custom cement board siding made to look like the panels of wainscoting seen in other ares of the home.

- Centered on a brilliant waterfront view, coffered ceilings, painted ceiling-insets and handsome columns distinguish living areas throughout the free-flowing design of the main level.
- A cozy hearth room lends a touch of formality to the rustic and refined collection of primitive furnishings, beautifully aged white oak floors and upholstered benches with built-in armoires.
- Vaulted ceilings and an open-air balcony flood the master retreat with sunshine upstairs and a floor-toceiling tile wall mimics shoreline waves in the luxury bath.
- Three additional en suite sleeping quarters, convenient laundry, office and an ultra-clever play nook demonstrate diligent design and continue the nautical theme on the upper level.
- Downstairs, oversized furnishings serve as a buffer to the family gathering and game area while extra quest quarters and fitness room take delight in some bonus privacy.

HOME DESIGN EFFECTIVE WAYS TO CHOOSE THE RIGHT FLOOR PLAN

One of the most exciting times in your life can be choosing a home! From what city you will live in to what neighborhood you decide to raise your family – the right home is a major decision. Even more important is how you and your family will use your home and ensure it fits with your lifestyle and the right floor plan can shape how you experience your home. From the size and shape, to where the rooms are located in relation to each other can make or break your home experience. Here are some tips to help you create the right space for your family.

Determine the size

Every family doesn't need a sprawling estate and every family won't feel comfortable in a small two bedroom home. Assess how many bedrooms you will require for your children and how many bathrooms are enough for you and visiting guests. Do you need office space or a kids play area?

Find your design style

Are you more traditional and prefer a compartmentalized floor plan where walls separate rooms or do you want a more open floor plan? Think of your furnishings and how you will decorate your home. Flowing and coordinated colors are most important when designing an open floor plan – so keep this mind when choosing a floor plan style.

Understand the pros and cons of your floor plan

There isn't a perfect floor plan. There will always be pros and cons and decide what are your priorities and what can you learn to live with or without. A large living room window wall that lets in gorgeous natural light may also make your energy cooling and heating bills higher. A floor plan that is open and spacious could make it hard to concentrate in your adjacent home office as your kids are watching TV in the living room.

Decide based on the layout not the finishes

Base your decision on how the home flows and will function for your daily activities. Don't get wowed by upgraded floors, countertops and appliances in the model home, imagine the home in a "stripped down" state and form your opinion from there. A floor plan shouldn't feel good because of the nice carpet that could go in the living room, it should feel right because the living room is a welcoming room off of the kitchen and foyer area for guests and family members.

Seek professional guidance

While you may know what you want in your future home, a design professional or realtor could help you consider factors that aren't tangible to the eye and touch. Factors such as energy savings/costs, possible affordability of mortgage payments, location to local resources like schools, churches and stores, and maintenance experience are all factors that a professional can give their guidance on.

Trust your instincts

All of us have the ability to "feel" when a space feels comfortable and will fit their needs. Take these instincts into consideration when touring different floor plans.

Know your budgetary limits

Let's face it; there is always the fantasy side of us that wants to go bigger and better than our wildest dreams. Before getting your heart set on one type of floor plan – know what the costs are associated with the layout. Ask a contractor or builder to help you determine costs as you narrow down to the floor plan that fits within your budget.

HOME OFFICE THAT WORKS FOR YOU CREATING A HOME OFFICE

With more and more people working from home, a home office is less of a luxury and more of a necessity. It is estimated that one in five Americans work from home. And with the fluctuating cost of gas and increased traffic causing longer commutes, that number is likely to grow even more every year.

"In a home office, surround yourself with space and proper light and colors you love," says Polly Timmer, owner of Polly Timmer Design.

"Consider your how you work, or would like to, DO you actually sit at a desk, or is a comfy lounge more your style," Timmer continues. "The home office needs to allow you to work in a fulfilled environment. Don't allow clutter to overtake the space. Plan for storage and management of your filing system and cords and cables. It does not have to be stuffy or boring."

Separate Your Space

Although you are physically working in the house, it is important to set up your home office so that the lines between your home life and your work life do not get blurred. By creating a barrier, you will be less tempted to take a television break in the middle of your work day or work on spreadsheets when you are supposed to be "home from the office."

Design Your Office to Match Your Work Style

When choosing the furniture and layout of your office, make sure if fits the way you choose to work. For example, if you believe in "a place for everything and everything in its place," be sure to allot enough space for adequate storage and file cabinets. If you work on several different projects, set up separate, smaller work stations dedicated to each task.

Show Off Your Style

There is no such thing as "one design fits all." While one person may prefer the look of dark woods and rich colors, someone else may favor a more whimsical look with bright colors and clean lines. This is your chance to bring in designs and items that best reflect your personality and interests. Don't be restricted by what you think a home office should look like. Make it your own since you will be the one spending the most time there.

Make It Comfortable

When choosing the furniture and amenities for your office, make sure that you are physically comfortable and that your work space is conducive to productivity.

• Your chair should be adjustable with adequate seat cushioning.

• Add a couch or armchair to allow for additional seating for guests or to provide a place to read away from your desk.

- Install recessed lighting which is less harsh on your eyes.
- Buy smaller desktop lights focused on task areas that are used for reading and writing to reduce eye strain.

The Charmer on Chancellor

Welcome to exclusive living! 56 West Homes and Design is proud to introduce our 2016 parade in the gorgeous Summerset West.

This home is a must see if you are looking for exceptional quality and exquisite design with select finishes that will knock your socks off! Beginning with the grand back entry you will be stunned with the woodwork that screams true craftsmanship! The cozy drop zone right off the garage provides a great place to set things when your hands are full. The spacious hall leads farther to a built in custom desk area and a very large locker storage system that any organization lover would covet! The powder bath features a unique vanity, solid surface and a gorgeous pendant light that commands attention. Our gourmet kitchen is a show stopper in so many ways, beginning with the fully custom cabinets built on site, barrel rolled ceiling, solid surface counter tops and of course a hidden walk through pantry with tons of storage options! The master suite is beyond exceptional and is any couples dream with a huge walk in closet, private bathroom and bedroom.

This home will leave you with the feeling of wanting to stay forever! We hope you make it a part of your 2016 parade tour!

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST AVERAGE COST PER SQUARE FOOT

The HBA gets this question on a weekly basis, "What is your average cost per square foot?" We cringe every time we hear it as there isn't really a simple answer.

Builders will tell you that it is difficult to just give a basic cost per square foot. Why the difference?

You have to know what is being considered in the cost per square foot number. Does it include landscaping and the cost of water and sewer (or well and septic)? Will it have a 700 foot driveway or 35 foot driveway. There is a big cost difference. Is underground sprinkling included in the number? How about appliances - included or not?

A ranch home vs. a two story home. Many people will say that they want a two story home because it is less costly to build than a ranch. That is generally true provided they that they have no use for the basement, the lower level.

The reason a two story home is less expensive is that you have a smaller foundation, fewer trusses and perhaps fewer floor joists than you have with a ranch home.

So when is a ranch home less expensive than a two story home? When you finish the lower level, the basement. With a ranch home, you double your square footage when you finish the lower level. With a two story home, you only grow finished square footage by a third when you finish the lower level. That's the difference.

Structure - the majority of the cost of a home is in the structure. Simplify the structure and you lower the cost per square foot of a home. A 2,400 square foot home with $15,000 trusses, compared to a 2,400 square foot home with $9,000 in trusses. Comparing the same homes again, the windows in the more expensive home cost $32,000. The other home had $11,000 worth of windows. Therefore, two homes with the same square footage and one has $27,000 more cost in just two components of the home. Other components can have a greater impact on the cost than the two examples selected.

One more point on structure, building a home shaped like a rectangle is less expensive than building a home that has lots of jogs, angles, and so forth. Again, simplify the structure and you lower the cost per square foot.

What is on the inside of the home. We build homes that have lots of tile, wood floors and solid surface countertops. All of the finer things. We have also built homes of the same size that have vinyl floors, formica countertops and pre molded showers. The cost difference could be $15,000 to $20,000.

"Yeah, Yeah all that stuff above is fine Mr. Builder, but how can I get an answer to my question?"

Sit and meet with the builder to review the plan that you have (or desire) and go through a brief list of the features you desire. A builder can ballpark a price for you.

Ask the builder to show you some homes that they have built and determine the price of those homes and the square feet. Then talk about the features of the home that make it more expensive or less.

Please keep in mind the old adage "garbage in, garbage out." When you are seeking a cost estimate from a builder the less detail you give, the less accurate the estimate. Do you want accuracy? Then give detail.

BEFORE YOU MOVE IN THE NEW HOME WALK-THROUGH

Before you go to settlement on the purchase of your new home, you and your builder will do a walk-through to conduct a final inspection.

This walk-through provides an opportunity to spot items which may need to be corrected or adjusted, learn about the way your new home works and ask questions about anything you don't understand.

Operation of Home Components

When you buy a new appliance or piece of equipment, such as a printer or a washing machine, you usually have to read the instructions before you understand how to use it all. With a new house, you will receive a stack of instruction booklets all at once. It helps if someone takes the time to show you how to operate all of the kitchen appliances, heating and cooling systems, water heater etc.

Maintenance Responsibilities

Part of your walk-through includes maintenance and upkeep information. Most new homes come with a oneyear warranty on workmanship and materials. However, such warranties do not cover problems that develop because of failure to perform required maintenance. Be sure to learn what your responsibilities are which are the builders.

Should a warranted problem arise after you move in, the builder is likely to have a set of warranty service procedures to follow. Except in emergencies, requests for service should be in writing. This helps to ensure that everyone clearly understands the service to be performed.

Builder Visits During the Year

Many builders schedule two visits during the first year — one near the beginning and the other near the end - to make necessary adjustments and to perform work of a non-emergency nature. Don't expect a builder to rush out immediately for a problem such as a nail pop in your drywall. Such problems occur because of the natural settling of the house and are best addressed in one visit near the end of the first year.

Your Inspection Checklist

Create a checklist when inspecting the house. The list should include everything that needs attention, and you and your builder should agree to a timetable for repairs. Builders prefer to remedy problems before you move in because it is easier to work in an empty house. Some items may have to be corrected after movein. For instance, if your walk-through is in the winter, your builder may have to delay landscaping adjustments until spring.

It is important that you be thorough and observant during the walkthrough. Carefully examine all surfaces of counters, fixtures, floors and walls for possible damage. Sometimes disputes arise because a buyer may discover a gouge in a counter top after move-in, and there is no way to prove whether it was caused by the builder's workers or the buyer's movers. Many builders ask their buyers to sign a form at the walk-through stating that all surfaces have been inspected and that there is no damage other than what has been noted on the walk-through checklist.

Ask a lot of questions during the walk-through and take notes on the answers. Don't worry about asking too many questions. That is how you learn. It is important to view the walk-through as a positive learning experience that will enhance the enjoyment of your new home.

HOME DESIGN 2016 DESIGN TRENDS

Modern Metallics

The breakout star of 2016 is going to be metallics, and – given their ability to instantly bring a sophisticated and glamorous touch to any space – it's not hard to see why. Whether adding a sleek touch with silver or chrome or warming a room with gold, rose gold or copper, every school of design can benefit from this trend.

One key difference that sets this year's take apart from previous metallic trends is the flexibility to mix and match. Don't hesitate to use one type of metal as the focal point of the space while working in a different type for a smaller accent role.

Sustainable Design

Cultural trends have long been known to influence design, and we expect a big push toward eco-friendly interiors. Incorporating natural materials such as wood or stone into your interiors is an easy way to achieve that goal. Whenever possible, look for artisan products. In addition to having a smaller carbon footprint than their mass-produced competitors, these products often have a longer lifespan.

'Outdoor' Prints

This term may seem vague, but in this context, we mean prints that can be found in nature. The coming year is poised for a comeback of plant-inspired decor, florals and animal prints. As with any print, a little goes a long way — especially when it comes to these bold looks.

Groovy Geometrics

When it comes to adding visual interest to a room, there's no easier way to make an impact than by adding a few geometric shapes. The recent interest in these shapely designs is a continuation of the '70s-inspired trend that has been turning heads. The great thing about this trend is that it can easily be incorporated into any style of design. Those who like an ultra-modern look should consider making a statement with shapely furniture pieces or light fixtures. For a more traditional look, simply incorporate a geometric pattern into the room using floor tiles or accent textiles.

Colors for 2016

Colors this season transcend cultural and gender norms. Vivid brights give way to excitement and optimism, though quiet stability prevails in this season's palette.

Expect to see the following colors both in fashion and home design.

Rose Quartz, a persuasive yet gentle tone that conveys compassion and a sense of composure.

Peach Echo, a shade that emanates friendlier qualities, evoking warmth and accessibility. It is an all-encompassing, tempered companion in the playful orange family.

Serenity comforts with a calming effect, bringing a feeling of respite even in turbulent times.

Snorkel Blue plays in the navy family, but with a happier, more energetic context.

Buttercup designers reveal a contrast to the other calm colors of the season.

Limpet Shell, a shade of aqua is clear, clean and defined.

Lilac Gray, brings us a new neutral which adds a distinctive edge to a classic gray shade.

Fiesta is a strong and fiery, yellow-based red, the vivid Fiesta provides a stark contrast to the calming, softer nature of this season's palette.

Iced Coffee, a transitional color, manifests as an earthy strong neutral foundation for the season.

Green Flash, this brilliant hue is representative of nature's persistent influence even in urban environments, a trend continuing to inspire designers.

FINANCING ADVICE FINANCING YOUR FIRST HOME

Buying your first house is very exciting. But financing your home purchase can be a daunting experience. In both cases, do your research and shop carefully to ensure you find exactly what you want and need.

Deciding how much to spend on your home and which type of mortgage will work best for you — as well as understanding the settlement process — can be confusing. However, there are many sources that can help you get prepared well before you step foot into a sales office, model home or open house.

- Get familiar with the lingo.
- Figure out what you can actually afford. Remember that, in addition to the monthly principal and interest, you will also pay into escrows for property taxes, hazard insurance and possibly a home owners' or condominium association assessment. Hold firm with that number and don't be tempted to agree to an amount higher than what you are comfortable spending. Mortgage calculators are a great way to figure out what your monthly payments would be based on interest rates and down payment amounts. Calculators can be found on most real-estate-focused websites.
- Pay down your debts. Credit card debt limits what you qualify for from a lender. Lenders want to see a total debt service ratio that is less than 40% of your monthly income.

- Attend a first-time home buying seminar. You can research your options without being influenced by someone who has a financial interest in the home or loan you choose. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) offers free housing counseling and seminars.
- HUD also has a handy booklet on its site called "Buying Your Home: Settlement Costs and Information." It describes process and explains most of the expenses you will encounter. It is free and most lenders are required to provide their loan applicants with a copy of this document under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA). However, you will be able to shop more wisely for settlement services if you have read this information before you visit a lender.

When you have done your research and are ready to move on to the next step, visit a lender, understand the loan choices that would be available to you, and, once you've determined the most suitable loan, get pre-approved for that loan. Since you will already know how much money you can borrow, you will know what price range you should look at and can move quickly if you are bidding on a house that has several interested buyers. A lender's pre-approval would still be subject to a final verification of your credit and a satisfactory appraisal, but it's a big step toward becoming a home owner. HOME REMODEL TIPS FOR A SMOOTH REMODEL

It's essential to have good communication Get a clear and mutual understanding on for a smooth home remodeling project. Does the remodeler listen? Does he or she answer questions clearly and candidly? Can you reach him when you need to? Does he return phone calls promptly? Does he let you know when problems arise and work with you on solving them?

contractor. You'll spend a lot of time with good rapport and trust in him or her.

Set a clear and mutual understanding about Discuss and agree on how change orders will the schedule. You and your home remodeler should agree on the schedule up front to avoid conflict and problems later in the project.

Request a written proposal. Often, two people remember the same conversation differently. Get the proposal in writing and work with the remodeler to ensure it reflects your wishes.

Agree on a well-written contract that covers all the bases. The contract should include these elements: a timetable for the project, price and payment schedule, detailed specifications for all products and materials, insurance information, permit information, procedures for handling change orders, lien releases, provisions for conflict resolution, notice of your right under the Federal Trade Commission's Cooling Off Rule (your right questions. to cancel the contract within three days if it was signed someplace other than the remodeler's place of business), and details on the important issues (such as access to your home, care of the home, cleanup and trash removal).

miscellaneous details up front. There are a lot of little details that need to be settled before work starts. What times of day will they be working? How will he or she access the property? How will cleanup be handled? How will they protect your property?

Remember to be flexible. Remodeling is an Make sure you are compatible with the interruption of your normal life. Remember to be flexible during the project so that you your remodeler so it's important to have a can handle the unexpected and go with the flow.

> be handled. With home remodeling there is always the chance you may want to change materials or other project details during the job. Also understand that changes could affect the schedule and the budget, so it's important you have all changes in writing.

Ask for a written lien waiver from the home remodeler upon completion of the work. If the remodeler hires subcontractors for portions of the work, then it is their responsibility to see the subcontractors compensated. This document will verify everyone has been paid.

Establish a project plan, covering all phases and dependencies in the work. Plan your big picture goals with the remodeler and discuss your needs. Hire a remodeler who will plan with you, listen to concerns and answer

BETTER LIVING MAXIMIZE YOUR HOME STORAGE

As the season changes, so do clothes and linens, making it a great time to reconfigure your closets, and maximize your storage. Before you toss the tools in a garage corner or stuff the down jackets into a box and toss it in the attic, why not evaluate your needs and make your storage both effective and attractive?

The first thing you should do is make a list of everything you want to store. Rick Dreiband of Grand Rapids Closet & Room Solutions says, "We sit down with our clients and help them think through what really needs to be stored. We ask questions like: Do you have more long storage or short? Do you fold more clothes or hang them? Do you like to use drawers? What are you really looking to store?"

This list will help you determine how much storage space you need and ensure that nothing gets lost once you start putting things away. "Once we determine the type of things that need to be stored, we move on to the style," Dreiband continues. "There are many options for people to customize their storage solutions, different textures, colors, and styles are available from simple to ornate."

A professional closet organizer can help you create storage solutions to fit your needs; they know the tricks of the trade and the options available. A well designed closet will not only add value to your home but also keep you sane.

TIPS FROM THE EXPERTS

Divide and Conquer

People tend to pull everything out of their closets and then run out of time and push it all back in making it worse. Divide and conquer. One day tackle your shoes, the next day your slacks and so on. Breaking it up allows you to finish the task at hand quicker leaving you with a sense of accomplishment.

Shelving

Shelving is one of the easiest ways to create more storage. It can be portable in the form of free-standing units, or permanent which is attached to your walls. Easy-to-install, heavy-duty shelving can be purchased at just about any major home supply store. Many of these units are designed so that you can leave as much room between the shelves as you like, making it easy to get larger and smaller items onto the same unit and saving you space. Custom shelving can be tailored to fit your needs.

Short on Space?

Look around your home for things that are going unused, or that might be empty-like file drawers-and store things away in there. Check under the bed.... under-the-bed storage containers come in a variety of sizes and styles, including ones with wheels for easy access and to protect hardwood floors from scratches when you pull them out. You can also buy simple risers that elevate your bed off the floor additional inches to create even more space.

Garage Storage

Garage storage has also gotten much more efficient. You can get built-in storage cabinets with doors so the space looks clean and orderly. There are also modular systems that enable you to choose what features are best for your needs; including hanging racks for sports equipment, hooks for tools, and more.

Most garages have pitched roofs to keep rainwater or snow from collecting on top, and this space is ideal for items you don't use on a daily or weekly basis. Store these things on platforms or racks that lower and raise either electronically at the touch of a button, or with an easyto-use pulley system.

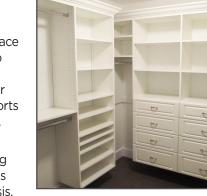

Damp-Proof Storage

If you are lucky enough to have a basement for storage, help keep your winter clothes dry by putting pieces of chalk into a small cloth bag that you can pack with the clothes you're storing. The chalk will absorb all the moisture, keeping your clothes protected.

The Drop Zone

We all have it; you come in the house and the stuff lands. Create built-in benches, hooks and bins to neatly tuck away boots, jackets, gardening equipment and other items your family uses frequently.

For more information about storage solutions talk to one of our Closet Organization members. You can find a complete list on our website at mygrhome.com.

HBA FOUNDATION MAKING THINGS HAPPEN

The Home Builders Association (HBA) of Greater Grand Rapids members do more than just amazing home construction projects.

As you tour the Spring Parade homes, it's easy to see that they are incredibly talented, innovative and dedicated to building beautiful homes. They are also caring, kind, and passionately dedicated to our community and industry.

The Grand Rapids HBA is one of the only associations in the country that has a 501(c)3 charitable arm. The HBA Foundation was formed in 1988 because members were building large scale housing projects, including a Ronald McDonald House and Hope Community, a 24-unit home for vulnerable single mothers and their children.

"There's a unique 'can do' culture as well as dedication to helping others and preserving the integrity of our industry among our members. It stems from what many of us were taught by our predecessors and families," said Jan Lehman of Standale Interiors and Lumber, who also serves as the HBA Foundation Board President. "We give back when we can because it's the right thing to do."

Powerful Partnerships

HBA members have contributed more than $230,000 in grants to Habitat for Humanity of Kent County, Shepherds of Independence, Bethany Christian Services YouthBuild, and other non-profits who share a commitment to special needs housing and the development of the next generation of housing industry professionals.

For the past 25 years - even during downturns, economic members constructed more than 400 wheelchair ramps and completed critical electrical, plumbing and home repairs for those who needed them most through Community Repair Days, a unique partnership with Home Repair Services of Kent County and Disability Advocates. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in lumber, nails, and other building materials have been donated, and HBA members faithfully volunteer their time.

"My wife's health was failing and she became wheelchair bound," shared an elderly ramp recipient. "If we had to leave the house, I'd ask our kids or a neighbor to help me carry her. Our ramp has given us back our freedom and it's much safer."

"My daughter and I had to live with family members until receiving my wheelchair ramp - now we live in our own home and we love it," shared a wheelchair ramp recipient.

Scholarships and Building Workforce

Since 1990, more than $150,000 in scholarships have been awarded through the HBA Foundation. In 1992, the Foundation awarded Robert (Bob) Meringa, a high school student at the time, a scholarship to pursue his career in construction.

Meringa, owner of RKM Homes & Renovations, recently visited the HBA offices to drop off his 2016 Spring Parade entry and to say thank you again for helping him launch his career.

"Our industry is in dire need of new talent," Meringa shared. "These scholarships offer kids encouragement, something to shoot for, and maybe an opportunity that they wouldn't otherwise have. Scholarships are earned through hard work, a resume, and casting of one's vision. The fact that the HBA will 'root and cheer' a young person on only makes our industry better as a whole."

Meringa now looks to pass on the lessons his father taught him to his four children. "He taught me that any job worth doing must be done right! I saw first-hand how many of his customers not only became life-long customers but also good friends."

The HBA Foundation continues to encourage the next generation, whether they are looking to go into the skilled trades, work for a builder, or own their own company. We know that the residential construction industry is a great place to make their mark on this world.

As you tour Bob's home and the other amazing Spring Parade of Homes, we hope you'll leave inspired to create your dream home. And, we invite you to partner with us through the HBA Foundation to build a great community for all. Visit www. mygrhome.com/foundation to learn more.

UNIVERSAL DESIGN WHAT IS DESIGN FOR INDEPENDENT LIVING?

Name one thing you've been doing since you were born. I've got one: getting older! In response to the huge wave of baby boomers starting to retire, all sorts of products and services are popping up catering to the 50-and-over crowd.

However, none of them hits as close to home as the nationally acclaimed CAPS program. CAPS stands for Certified Aging-in-Place Specialist. It is a construction credential that has builders, architects, remodelers, designers and even occupational therapists buzzing. Far beyond using universal design ideas, aging-in-place (a.k.a independent living) principles are sweeping changes designed to custom-fit your home to you and your family as time goes by. CAPS design takes your current and future circumstances into consideration. CAPS design principles focus on elegant, aesthetically enriching, barrier-free environments. These are changes that can actually increase the value of your home, according to some realtors.

What exactly is aging-in-place or universal design? If you are like the majority of Americans you want to continue living at home in a familiar environment throughout your maturing years. Aging-in-place means living in your home safely, independently and comfortably, regardless of age or ability level. It addresses the need to remodel existing homes and design new homes, so that people can age in place and not have to move to assisted-living facilities as they age. Since the vast majority of homes we live in are not well designed for this, a movement in residential construction has sprung up to meet this new consumer demand.

Boomers, who are 77 million strong and make up 28% of the U.S. population, are quickly catching onto this trend. The economics of aging-in-place modifications are a no-brainer. Moving to a typical assisted-living facility can cost up to $60,000 annually. The cost to widen the bathroom door, put in safety bars, and add a roll-in shower would typically cost about $6,000 to $8,000, but doing so is a one-time expense, not a yearly drain on your finances.

In addition to the economics, consider the psychological impact of being uprooted from your community, familiar rituals, independence and privacy. The affordability of aging-in-place remodeling is made enhanced by the fact that medically necessary changes (such as wider doorways or a roll-in shower) are tax deductible if backed up by a letter from your doctor.

Too early to think this applies to you? Consider how many folks struggle with bouts of arthritis at an early age. If you fell and broke a leg, how easy would it be to get up and downstairs in your house? Perhaps you have aging parent or relative who is facing these challenges who may need to move in with you.

Construction and design professionals are taking advantage of the CAPS training across the nation. This designation is taught through the National Association of Home Builders in collaboration with AARP. You can find builders and remodeler with the CAPS designation at www.mygrhome.com/caps/.

Look for the CAPS credential as a reliable way to identify professionals to modify your home or build a new one that is designed for a lifespan. CAPS graduates receive training about the technical/ construction aspects and learn about the unique aspects of working with older Americans. They must also take formal business training, maintain their credential through continuing education and even must subscribe to a Code of Ethics.

For more information visit myGRhome.com or call us at (616) 281-2021.

What kind of changes are we talking about? The overall goal is to make the home safer, with less maintenance and more barrier-free.

Getting safely and securely into and out of the house.

- Better outdoor lighting to get you from your car to the door.
- Attractive ramps or a zero-step entrance for the home.
- A package shelf by the front door.
- Handrails at existing steps and porches.
- A front door with sidelight for security.

Changes in the kitchen for easier meal preparation and eating.

- Lever-handle faucets with pull-out spray.
- Raised dishwasher to avoid back strain (a good idea for front-loading washers and dryers, too).
- Rolling island that can be placed back under the counter.
- Revolving corner shelves and pull-out shelves.
- Lower, side-opening oven.
- Pull-out cutting board.
- Adjustable height sink.
- Side-by side refrigerator with slide-out shelves and a water/ice dispenser.
- Cooktop with controls on front.

Changes in the bathrooms - the number one place for accidents.

- Attractive grab bars in the shower.
- Lever handles on faucets.
- Slide-bar-type hand-held shower, for sitting or standing.
- Shampoo nooks inset in the wall.
- Curbless showers so that there is nothing to step over. These can be rolled into if a wheelchair becomes necessary later.
- Widened entry doors to at least 32."
- 32"-36" pocket doors.
- Higher toilets with non-slam seats and lids.

Moving around within the house

- Improved lighting with recessed fixtures in common areas and hallways.
- · Lever handles on doors and windows.
- Lower light switches and thermostats; raised outlets.
- Planning for a future elevator by stacking closets.
- Adding blocking in walls for future chair lift at stairs.
- Wider doors that accommodate wheelchairs and walkers.

Refined Farmhouse

Nestled in the trees of Burwood Hills sits Bruce Heys Builder's vision of the "Modern Farmhouse". This Refined Farmhouse showcases modern amenities like professional grade appliances and custom cabinetry throughout. Custom built-ins and trim details are highlighted by nods to classic farmhouse design including wide plank floors, apron front sinks and rustic barn wood reclaimed from local farms. The main floor Owner's Retreat is the perfect blend of modern-meets-farmhouse design. Warm plank flooring and refined plank board walls set the stage for the stunning freestanding soaking tub and walk in shower.

Unique touches like the special home for the family dog tucked away in the main floor laundry and the custom pantry cabinet to conceal kitchen necessities are a must see. With our talented in-house design team and skilled carpenters, you will find attention to detail and expert craftsmanship throughout this custom home.

We invite you to take a look at our whole house remodel/addition in beautiful East Grand Rapids. Our referral client approached us since their beloved 1950's colonial style home needed to be updated to meet the needs of their young family. They were looking for a seasoned builder with complex renovation experience that they could trust to handle the job from design through implementation. We worked closely with them design a solution that not only added needed square footage but also redesigned the existing layout.

The major renovation included a new mid century modern style kitchen complete with quartz countertops and high end appliances. It also included remodeling four complete bathrooms and creating a mudroom/drop zone transitional space from the outside into the kitchen complete with lockers and a message center. Unique features include a two sided indoor/outdoor fireplace and custom mid century modern style railings. All existing hardwood floors were restored and refinished to their original luster.

Please come visit us and see how the leading custom builder and home renovator in West Michigan can help you realize your dream home.

FOR OUR MEMBERS, FOR OUR COMMUNITY DO YOU KNOW THE HOME BUILDERS ASSOCIATION

The Home Builders Association of Greater Grand Rapids (HBAGGR) was created by a group of 18 builders in 1945 with the vision to create a better community with better builders. Today, we still operate with that same vision. We are a professional nonprofit trade association with nearly 550 proud member companies. Our members range from builders and remodelers, to accountants and flooring retailers. When you use an HBAGGR member, it means that you have chosen to use a trusted professional.

At the HBAGGR, our members receive exclusive benefits that help them run their business and save money. But, did you know the HBAGGR also has services for homeowners? The HBAGGR provides our community with the tools necessary to make educated and unbiased decisions regarding their home.

Did you know builders need to be licensed and insured to work on your property? Members of the HBA are both licensed and insured and ready to help you complete any project for your home.

Our members belong to the HBA for a reason. Not only are they involved with furthering their education through our classes, or showcasing a home in the Parade of Homes, they also care about professionalism in the building industry. They invest time and money in the Association, which supports the services the HBA offers to fellow members and homeowners. The HBA also can help when you have a conflict. We are here to help both the contractor and the homeowner work through their concerns and resolve any conflict that arises. With a trusted process for facilitating communication and offering resources, we make sure our members and their customers are taken care of.

In addition to promoting the industry and putting on events like the Parade of Homes, the HBA also has a charitable foundation which is involved in supporting other nonprofits in Greater Grand Rapids, as well as supporting efforts to develop the next generation of the building industry.

The HBA also gives back by soliciting help from local non-profit organizations to staff the Parade of Homes, which in turn means a donation back to those organizations. In the past 20 years the HBA has donated over $2 million to local non-profits with nearly $100,000 donated in the last three years!

Whether you are looking to build the home of your dreams or need more information on your next home project, the Home Builders Association is a great place to start when looking for a trusted professional. Now that you know, don't forget to start here!

"Built on Excellence" is more than just a catchy motto...

"Excellence comes not only from doing right things over and over again, but from constantly learning and improving on what you have done before. It comes from a desire to be the best at what you do and then finding a way to do it even better the next time around."
